A George I Giltwood Pier Mirror

England, circa 1725

The greek key pattern around the frame is a particularly rare feature. A related mirror with similar greek-key cut gesso decoration, a cartouche flanked by a swan neck pediment and egg and dart mouldings was in the collections of Viscount Clifden at Wimpole Hall in 1931.

An exceptional and particularly rare George I gilt gesso pier mirror of impressive tall proportions. The bevelled mirror plates within a frame crested by a broken swan neck pediment and central cartouche with acanthus decoration above a carved lambrequin, with eagle heads to the sides, the mirror plate immediately framed with a stylised Greek key pattern.

The carving and composition of the decorative detailing of the finest quality.
