A Pair of George I Walnut Chairs

England, circa 1720

Culzean Castle, overlooking the Firth of Clyde, was designed by Robert Adam in the late 18th century for the 10th Earl of Cassilis on the site of the tower house dating to the 1400s. In addition to designing its impressive exterior, Adam designed the interiors of the castle as well, including the grand oval staircase and the furnishings. The castle has been part of the National Trust for Scotland since 1945.

A very fine pair of George I walnut side chairs. The chairs with upholstered backs and seats raised on cabriole legs ending in pad feet.

The walnut of particularly good colour.

Height: 37.80 in (96 cm)
